

Imagine a day without Lake Michigan?

If we have no water in Lake Michigan what will happen to most of us? Every morning people brush their teeth and they use water, but without water, you can't successfully do that because you won't remove the toothpaste. This means that you won't be able to brush your teeth and your chances of getting cavities are high. Mostly everyone takes a shower, and what do you need in order to take a shower? Yep, water. If we didn't take a shower for a day we would smell horrible.

Hygiene isn't the only problem we'll have to deal with, we need water for our body to function properly. Without water, our kidneys use more energy. On top of that, we wouldn't have any energy to move our body and we'll get tired. Eventually, your kidneys won't be able to function without water and your other organs can fail which has a chance to lead to death.

Next, we would need water for outdoor activities because we would be using our energy and water is one of the sources to sustain our energy. We also need to worry about our plants/vegetables because they need water, and if there isn't water they will probably die depending on the plants. Also, our bathroom wouldn't be able to flush out our waste because there's no water and it'll be smelly. This is my reason for why you should be thankful for our lake Michigan for giving us fresh/clean water.

Day without Water

Crestwood Middle School

Water, where would we be without it?

In a lake, in a cup, in life.

Without water, fish couldn't swim, humans couldn't live, nothing could function.

It isn't just clean water, because we're clinging on to our last bit of it.

Of nothing, no water supply, no drinking water, no swimming water.

No human could survive, no aquatic life could survive.

But that's what we're made to do? Survive?

You can't do what you were made to do without water.

Take a look at our brothers and sisters of the current Native Americans.

They have special boxes to use as a bathroom because they have no water.

They have to live life like they're an ancient civilization, because of no water.

We're not imagining a day without water, because that is a reality.

People need to wake up and know, this isn't a what-if question, this is a what-is question.

What is the current percentage of water where Native Americans live?

What is the way the Native Americans found to survive?

What is the importance of water?

It is much more than a bubble in your child's bath.

It is much more than a droplet in your cup.

It is much more than something to hold you in a pool.

It is what we use to live.

It is what we use to continue life.

It is what we use to continue to be in our loved one's life.

So we don't have to imagine it, we have to realize.

Because the Great lakes are gone

By: Abigail Stiltner

Imagine waking up with all the great lakes gone

No rain.

No showers.

No being scolded for leaving the water on.

Everything is dry and rough.

It's got to be tough.

Because the great lakes are gone

No crying.

No sweating

Because the great lakes are gone

Little to drink

None to wash

Because the great lakes are gone

No lakes

No rivers

Because the great lakes are gone

The water is depleted

No fish can live

Because the great lakes are gone

The trees are gone

The plants are gone

Because the great lakes are gone

Endless list of don'ts

Don't water the lawn

Don't fill your pool

Because the great lakes are gone

The great lakes aren't so great

Michigan is not known

Because the great lakes are gone
